Kendra and her boyfriend are sharing the same girl. This tale chronicles the lives of several queer women who navigate life in silence. Dealing with drug addiction, assault, personality disorders, and closeted behavior. They hang out at one bar in the town they live in, so everybody knows everyone else's business. At least for that day. A society forged on the edge of the mainstream; right at the very thin line between love and hate, with no rules on the inside, and minimal intrusion from the outside. Anything might happen over the period of a weekend that could change a woman's life, legacy or virtue.
